

Friends share snacks, not pills.

Illicit (illegal) fentanyl is a harmful street drug. It's showing up in fake pills that look just like real prescription OxyContin, Adderall, Percocet, and Xanax.

Only take medicine that has been prescribed to you, and don't share it with friends. Because friends help keep one another safe.

Everyone deserves to live,
and anyone can be a friend for life.

Use your influence for good.

Peer pressure isn't all bad.
Encourage your friends to:

- Try out for a sports team
- Audition for the school play
- Do what makes them feel healthy and happy

That's peer pressure done right.

Talk to them if you see them being pressured to try fake prescription pills or other drugs. Because friends look out for one another.

Everyone deserves to live,
and anyone can be a friend for life.

Your brain is amazing. Don't risk it.

The part of your brain that helps you make safe choices is still growing. That can make it hard to decide if something is risky or not.

The fact is taking pills that aren't prescribed to you is never safe.

Illicit fentanyl is a street drug that can cause overdose or death. It's showing up in fake pills that look like real prescription OxyContin, Adderall, Percocet, and Xanax. The risk to your brain and body just isn't worth it.

Everyone deserves to live,
and anyone can be a friend for life.
